

COMPARES 1905 GIANTS WITH CLUB OF PRESENT

Latter, Says McGraw, a Stronger Organization Than His World Champions.

TEAM MAKING MORE RUNS

Figures Show Steady Increase in Number of Extra Base Hits Over 1910.

"This ball club," says John McGraw, referring to his Giants, "is a stronger all around club than the giants that won the world's championship in 1905. It is making more runs than that club did."

Let us look the two teams over and see. Behind the bat in 1905 McGraw had Breman and Bowerman, and Bresnahan was such a good man that the present catching staff of the Giants has nothing on the 1905 team. Bresnahan, like Meyers, was a fine batsman, as good as all around backstop as the chief and a better base runner. He was quite as valuable to the team as is Meyers to-day. Bowerman was at his best in those days too and though the Giants have two proficient second string men in Wilson and Hartley the catching staff was as strong then as now.

The pitching mainstays in 1905 were Mathewson, McGinnity, Taylor, Wilcox and Ames. McGraw more than fills the place left vacant by McGinnity. Wilcox perhaps isn't as dependable now as then, but he and Ames and Mathewson are going strongly. Mathewson with his head work and general skill still being a potent figure in the box, Grandall is more valuable to the team than was Taylor and with Tearean coming along the Giants are better equipped on the mound than when they beat the Athletics seven years ago.

McGraw says Merkle is the best first baseman in baseball, and he means it. The only one who can measure skill with him is McGraw. Merkle is a better first baseman than McGraw ever was. He covers ground like a shortstop, is a first class batter and base runner and is a first rate guard on the bases. McGraw's defense has been as good as any fielder's in the game.

Pittsburgh, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago are the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth best teams in the league.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

The Pirates and Reds were the winners yesterday in the National League. The former put the Cubs away without a great deal of trouble and the Reds, tired of being mauled, girded up their loins and threw the gaff into the Cardinals.
